Helen Shearman Gue was, besides beling a complete artistle success, a most delightful social occasion.

Mrs. Gue needs no introduction to the musical world of Sait Lake, having delighted many admirers when as Miss Shearman she was frequently heard in concert. Those who knew her best and were familiar with her work during a long period of time, said last night after the first number that, with all its beautiful qualities, Mrs. Gue's voice had improved in a most marked degree.

had improved in a most handle gree.

She was assisted last night by the double quartette of the Orpheus club-Messers. Plummer, Bennett, Westervelt, Shearman, Robertson, Zulick, Jayne and Pcahody. In two numbers, the "Screnade" by Touriellot and Marston's "I'm a Pligrim," the chorus assisted the soloist in their usual able. To the latter number the ansisted the soloist in their usual able manner. To the latter number the andlence responded with such an insistent encore that the artists were obliged it. Beepond. "Annie Laurie" was given with charming effect by Mrs. Gue, the chorus assisting.

Of the solo numbers, perhaps the one that was most enjoyed was Nevin's "Of Thee I'm Thinking." The applause that greeted Mrs. Gue's rendition of this delightful piece made it necessary for the singer to respond a second time. She gave "Through the Night" as an encore, and was again applauded. Mac-Dowell's "Folk Song" was another number in which Mrs. Gue was especially happy, while Wilson G. Smith's "I'l But Knew" displayed her beautiful voice to equal perfection.

The entire programme was a most enloyable one, and every one of the eleven numbers was received with much cultuslasm. Mrs. Gue's many friends had availed themselves of the opportunity to bear her sing again, and the affair took on the appearance of a delightful social function.

Mr. Gue acted as accompanist for Mrs. Gue.
